OBITUARY

Mr. Arthur Henderson

London, Oct. 20.

Mr. Arthur Henderson, former
Foreign Minister in the Labour Government, one-time leader of the Party and the President of the Disarmament Conference, a man who has laboured to safeguard the peace of the world, died to-day after a prolonged illness.

Born in Glasgow in 1863, but moving with his family to Newcastle at an early age, Mr. Henderson was an iron-moulder by trade and worked with metal until he entered the grimmer struggle of politics, when he abandoned his trade. He was a Liberal before there was a Labour party.

In 1903, however, he won Barnard Castle for Labour, and was one of 11 Labourites in the House of Commons. He rose rapidly in the party and having been chairman of the Parliamentary group from 1908 to 1910 and from 1914 to 1917 it was he who stood out against Mr. Ramsay MacDonald and supported national conscription.

When Labour was invited to join the Coalition Cabinet in 1915, Mr.
Henderson became President of the Board of Education and later Paymaster-General, but his real task was to advise the Cabinet on labour questions.

When Labour was invited to join the Coalition Cabinet in 1915,
Mr. Henderson became President of the Board of Education and later Paymaster-General, but his real task was to advise the Cabinet on labour questions.

MINISTRY OF LABOUR

From his activities sprang the idea of a Ministry of Labour, the foundations of which were lased by him, though Mr. John Hodge was the first minister to hold the post.

The presence of Labour in the Coalition caused acute controversy in the party, but when the Coalition fell in 1915 and Mr. Lloyd George took the reins, Mr. Henderson entered the War Cabinet of Five, without portfolio.

Then followed a period of ups and downs. He clashed with the Government over the international Labour conference in Stockholm in 1917 and left his post in the Cabinet. In 1918, although Labour returned 61 members to the House, Mr. Henderson was not among them. He was defeated again in 1922 and 1923. But in all these years he was returned at a by-election.

After the 1923 victory, he became Home Secretary of the Labour Government. It was not this time that he framed, with Lord Parmoor, the draft of the Geneva protocol for the settling of international disputes by arbitration and conciliation.

GREATEST WORK

But Mr. Henderson's greatest work was done in the cause of disarmament. He was working for that ideal all the time. And his work for the League of Nations was untiring. It was Mr. Henderson who was the strongest proponent of schemes to afford financial aid to states which were the victims of aggression or threatened aggression.

Known in Labour circles as "Uncle Arthur," he was a genial man with a solidity and tenacity of character which kept him on a moderate course. Even his advocacy of disarmament was not radical. At the League in 1930 he demanded the reduction of land, sea and air forces and he achieved success in this direction by largely assisting in the organization of the Five Power Conference.

With the collapse of the hopes of the Disarmament Conference, of which he was President, Mr.
Henderson's health, which had been anything but robust, broke down very completely. That was about a year ago. Since then he had rallied and returned to his labours for disarmament, but he was not the same man. Two months ago he went into hospital in England, and it was then feared that his condition was most grave.

Within a month it was realized

PARKING UNDERGROUND

Complex Problem Of Great Importance

The question of underground garages discussed in a recent article in The Autocar is of great importance at the present time to be allowed to sink again into the oblivion of lost opportunities by reason of the practical difficulties which have to be overcome. At intervals in the last ten or more years the subject has been raised and proposals have been put forward, but constructional difficulties and, perhaps, traffic conditions ruling at the time did not appear to justify an exhaustive examination of the possibilities which lie in the underground development of the squares in our big cities.

MAIN CAUSE OF PROBLEM

Not many months ago, when opening an up-to-date garage in London, the Minister of Transport remarked that when an ordinary motor car owner used the highway for parking his car he was putting out of public use land of a capital value of £20,000; and he said further that, not only was this abuse of the roadways the main cause of traffic delay and a frequent cause of accident, but also that, if we could eliminate stationary cars in the streets, London would be a comparatively easy city to travel in.

Mr. Frank Pick has stated that the losses of the London Passenger Transport Board through the delay and a frequent cause by car parking amount to no less than £1,000,000 per annum, and there can hardly be a person who uses the streets for business or pleasure who does not continually pay toll to the motorist who, for lack of any other space is compelled to park his car by the roadside.

In the face of such facts as these, let us consider the difficulties which would have to be faced if the authorities were to decide to excavate the main squares in the West End of London, or in other cities, and provide parking at moderate charges.

The first thing to be considered is the expense, and every contractor is aware that it would cost nearly three times as much to build a car park with a capacity of, say, 500 cars below ground as it would to construct similar accommodation above ground. Few people realise the cost of excavation in a great city. Although the actual excavation is effected by mechanical means, the material has to be got rid of—first, on to a lorry, then (in the case of London) to a barge and, finally, to the North Sea. Here is a substantial problem and the next one for consideration is the structure to be created below ground.

ORIGINAL APPEARANCE

This is in the nature of a steel and concrete chamber, so cross-braced as to resist lateral pressure and yet with the roof-supporting stanchions placed far enough apart to enable cars to be manoeuvred. But not only have the stanchions to support their own roof; they have, in addition, to take the weight of perhaps a ten-foot over-burden of earth, for it is clear that there can be no justification for excavating a garden or square unless it is restored again to its original outward appearance. All this presents a problem in steel which can only be solved at great expense.

Now let us consider the economics of such an undertaking, for even the most enterprising city or borough council or traffic authority has its obligations to the ratepayer and the taxpayer. The fundamental weakness of even the most modern garage to-day lies in the waste of space required for manoeuvring. "Wide open spaces" are essential to the efficient garage if it is of the normal, all-on-one-level type; and, unhappily, they amount to over 50 per cent. of the total space. Thus, a garage to hold 500 cars must actually have an area equal to a capacity of 1,000. But the motorist, naturally enough, rather objects to being asked to pay for all the dead space.

Will he use a car park if one is conveniently available? The attractions of the street are great, and the police, on the whole, a kindly tribe. But, after all, we use our cars for our own convenience; we are not entitled to ask other people to pay in time and money for that, and motorists, being a reasonable, if sorely tried, community, probably would use a car park if they had not to go miles to find one.

Let us try to picture Hanover Square, London, as it would be if it were excavated and made into an underground car park. The road is clear of vehicles, an attractive waiting-room is at either end where the ramps run below ground, and at the far end, there is a ventilating shaft in the form of a cenotaph. Surely it is a more beautiful spectacle than is to be seen to-day, and it will be worth while considering if the difficulties cannot somehow be overcome, bearing in mind that Hanover Square is paralleled by many others in the Metropolis—Cavendish Square, St. James's Square, and Golden Square among them.

STOWING MORE CARS

Is it possible to get more cars into a given space than is done under garage practice to-day? Yes, by mechanisation. The vertical mechanised car park has been in operation in America for some years, and the horizontal mechanised car park must, sooner or later, come into operation here, for in no other way can we double the capacity of our car park and so derive a revenue which will bear some relation to the capital expenditure involved.

In his article in The Autocar on underground parks Mr. H. C. Lafone modestly stated that he awaited with interest the onslaught of those who will wish to "eat the idea" in pieces. Only on this question of revenue can his idea be seriously criticised, and mechanisation goes a long way towards meeting the difficulty.

Motorists contribute generously to the national budget, and the civic authority can be reasonably expected to contribute towards their difficulties. To restrict the entry of private cars to certain parts of great cities would surely be a retrograde step, and yet it is in serious contemplation. To anticipate the conditions of tomorrow and provide cars with reasonable facilities should be the aim of traffic authorities to-day, and in the underground, fully mechanised for park lies the solution of the problem.

ESTIMATED COST

The amenities of our squares and gardens must be preserved for the ratepayers, and this can be done most effectively by according, at the same time, consideration to the reasonable demands of the motorist. Competent authorities have estimated that the construction of a fully mechanised car park under such a site as Hanover Square would cost approximately £175,000, and have a capacity of 440 cars. To service the capital expenditure at 3 per cent. would require an annual payment of £5,250, and the revenue to be derived at an average charge of 1s. should be more than double this figure. Leaving, in my submission, an adequate margin for operation expenses.

The indirect gains from the installation of three or four such car parks beneath the squares of the West End would be incalculable, and it is surely reasonable that either a guarantee or a contribution from the Road Fund should be put at the disposal of the local authorities to enable them to make proper surveys and put plans in hand forthwith.

A DIESEL ENGINE

A Manchester firm have produced a new Diesel oil engine which draws a 14-ton car at a cost of a farthing a mile. A large number of orders has already been received.

The engine has been fitted in a Lagonda sports car with good results. An official of the firm said: "We are starting commercial production, and it will be a big thing for the works. Further experiments are necessary before we can make a similar will come in time."

"No magneto or coil is necessary. The oil is fired entirely by compression. For that reason a heavier engine is required, but further research and tests will probably lower the weight."

Note.—The firm is Messrs. L. Gardner & Sons, Exeter.

MOTOR JOTTINGS

SPLENDID T. T.

British Four-cylinder Win

The Tourist Trophy has been won, and well won, by a British car, one of the new four-cylinder 14-litre Rileys, prepared and driven by F. W. Dixon. Its performance was altogether exceptional; so much so, in fact, that even now it has not shown its full capabilities, and once more it is demonstrated that a small four-cylinder engine can develop power far in excess of that which a few years ago was thought to be the limit of the type.

The race itself was run, by the greatest of good fortune, on one of the finest days there, had been in Northern Ireland for quite a long while, and that had a very considerable effect not only on the speeds of the cars but on the equanimity of the drivers. Except for the obvious superiority of Dixon's machine—something quite out of the ordinary—the handicap seemed in the result extraordinarily good, cars of various sizes and types figuring well up in the final order, and once again it was proved that seconds lost at a pit during refuelling or tyre changing can vitally affect the result. After some forebodings, the tyres stood the stress admirably. In spite of the fact that the non-slip surface specially provided for the road had, during the previous year, caused exceptional wear to the treads. So, happily, the elaborate mechanism set up by the R.A.C. to warn drivers of possible tyre trouble was not found to be necessary.

The disaster that overtook the cars of one team was caused by one of those troubles which occur from time to time, however much care is exercised, and which, of course, point to even more drastic and careful inspection of materials—incidentally among the most difficult things in the world to render fault-proof.

The R.A.C. are certainly to be congratulated on the success of this series of races, and their decision to confine the cars to machines without superchargers has been undoubtedly justified. It is possible that even more stringent methods of car inspection might prove to be beneficial, but this inspection is itself a problem so difficult that no two people can be found to agree as to what is exactly the best method of carrying it out.

WAGON TIPPLER FOR CHINA

A special form of wagon tippler for use on the Lunghai Railway in China was recently constructed by a firm in Erith, Kent, as part of a complete coal handling and conveying plant, supplied by the company.

The tippler is designed to handle wagons having a maximum capacity of 40 tons, and as the wagons weigh about 13 tons the tippler is rated nominally as a 60-ton machine. It is required to deal with 40-ton trucks at the rate of 10 per hour, or 20-ton trucks at the rate of 20 per hour, although it will handle the larger trucks at the rate of 20 per hour if necessary, giving a total capacity of 800 tons per hour.

Note.—The firm is the Fraser & Chalmers Engineering Works of the (British) General Electric Co.

ARE THEY ILLEGAL?

On many of our classified roads where they enter built-up areas there is a "30" disc on the left of the highway and a "de-limit" bar on the right. In some cases there are double-sided signs on both sides of the road, but these are found as a rule, only on the big thoroughfares. The question is: Are the "single" limit signs legal? It would seem that they are "not," and if that be so, the further question arises: Can a motorist be properly convicted of exceeding a limit which is not indicated in the correct way?

Under Section 2 (a) of the Traffic Signs Directions issued by the Minister of Transport on May 20th last it is laid down that "a sign of the type illustrated in diagram 1" (the ordinary "30" sign) "shall be erected on both sides of the road" on classified roads. From this it certainly appears that a very large number of our roads are not legally marked. It would be interesting to have this point raised in a defence to a speed limit prosecution, and to learn the views of magistrates upon it.

MOTOR NOTES FROM GREAT BRITAIN

Five Miles A Minute!

The Bonneville Salt Flats, Utah, are already assured of an important place in the history of motor speed records by the successes of three separate British drivers—John Cobb, George Eyston and Sir Malcolm Campbell. The latter has broken the World Land Speed Record no less than 9 times since his first attempt in 1924, and in that period the figure has risen from 146.16 to 301.13 m.p.h.

It is understood that on the latest occasion "Blue Bird" was equipped with a photo-recording apparatus, so that a continuous record was obtained of the instrument readings during the historic run, and in this way it was possible to secure valuable data.

The weight of the car was nearly 5 tons, and it has been calculated that about 90 per cent of the 2,350 B.H.P. output from the Rolls-Royce 12-cylinder supercharged aero engine was required to overcome wind resistance.

DISCRIMINATING OWNERS

Those who maintain that the day of the luxury car is over must revise their ideas in accordance with actual facts. Last year models for no less than 320 cars were built at the Hooper works at Acton, most of the chassis being of either Rolls-Royce or Daimler make.

When the cost of a complete car of this class is considered, it will be realised that the turnover thus represented means a large volume of opinion in favour of the luxury car.

THE OIL INDUSTRY

A survey of the present position of the oil industry which appeared in "The Times" recently included a number of impressive facts. For instance, Great Britain leads other European countries compared with France's 2,460,000 tons.

It was pointed out that motor transport is of the greatest social significance and should be encouraged, not repressed. In particular, it should not be regarded as the enemy of railway transport. The railways take burdens which the roads could never assume, while the motor car does what a train could never do. Each is essential to the national economy, and legislation should be directed to their point maintenance.

The prefacing of the Diesel engine, rightly described as the most efficient power unit known, marks another stage in the oil industry's rapid progress.

A SIGNIFICANT APPOINTMENT In this connection an appointment made by an important oil company is of interest. Mr. Sidney Amos, M.Eng., who was being practising as a Consulting Diesel Engineer, has recently joined the staff of Germ Lubricants Ltd., of London.

A Master of Engineering of London University, with considerable experience in the installation and operation of stationary and marine Diesel engines, Mr. Amos was with a well-known English engine builder and also with a Continental company before he commenced as a consultant. The firm he has now joined has a far-reaching experience of Diesel engines of all kinds, including compression ignition engines for road vehicles.

LONDON "GOING OILER" It has recently been announced that no more petrol-driven buses or coaches are to be purchased by London Transport, and it is estimated that within 10 years the whole fleet will be composed of "oilers." At present about 850 are in operation.

This announcement gives point to the further order for 80 A.E.C. "Q"-type single-deck placed last month, making 180 of this type of vehicle ordered by the Board within a year. All will be powered by the A.E.C.-Ricardo oil engine.

During August the same makers received an order for 200 six-wheel trolley bus chassis in connection with the big scheme for converting some 90 miles of tramways in the metropolitan area to trolley bus operation.

Eleven A.E.C.-English Electric trolley bus chassis are to be constructed for early service in Johannesburg; part of the city's transport scheme which is scheduled for completion in time for the opening of the big exhibition there next year.

AN ELECTRIC RAILCAR

The product of a concern well-known for the manufacture of trolley buses, a novel Ransomes electric railcar has recently been completed at the Ipswich works. Designed to carry 12 passengers or a ton of goods, it runs on a standard gauge track and can be operated from either end.

Being battery-driven the fire risk is almost negligible, and, in fact, "safety first" principles loom large in its design. A brake is provided on the end of each driving motor and these are arranged to be normally "on." It is impossible to start the car until the brake has been released, and if any accident should happen to the driver, the supply of current is instantly broken, and the brakes are automatically applied.

A PROVED SUCCESS

The Leyland hydraulic torque converter is proving increasingly popular amongst bus companies as well as in the municipal world. In the latter field it is noteworthy that 91 per cent of the orders for passenger vehicles placed by British municipalities with the company during the last 4 months specified this unit. Overseas Pretoria and Johannesburg already have fleets of over 20 in service.

READY RESPONSE

The Minister of Transport's recent remarks favouring the early elimination of horse-drawn traffic have attracted widespread attention, and as the largest users of horse transport in Britain, the great railway groups are intimately concerned.

It is instructive, therefore, to learn that during August orders were placed by the home railway companies with Scammell Lorries for 258 mechanical horse motive units and 538 trailers, making the total orders placed by this important section up-to-date 1,880 motive units and 3,250 trailers, fitted with the Scammell patent automatic coupling gear.

ADJUSTABLE STEERING WHEELS

When I come to buy my next car the deciding factor will be whether it has an adjustable steering wheel or not, writes a correspondent. The new Blumel adjustable wheel is being supplied on several of the 1936 models and sooner or later, no doubt, it will be standard on many more. Its need is obvious, especially in cases where a car is used by several members of a family. Recently I did a little practising what we preach and rearranged my driving seat so that I could see out of the front window very nicely, a though it felt like driving a taxi. Then the lady who usually sits on my left, but who of late has insisted on sitting on my right occasionally, wanted to take the car out. The new driving position did not suit her at all; so out came the packing, and we are now where we were before. An adjustable steering wheel would give us both what we want. There is a man "in our avenue" who, because he has such long legs, always looks as if he were slung over the village chair. A Blumel wheel would cure his troubles and those of a little gentleman in the next road who always seems to be cuddling the steering wheel. An adjustable steering wheel is as logical as an adjustable throttle, yet it has taken car manufacturers all these years to realise it.

NIGHT FLYING

Shanghai-Nanking Air Service

Nanking, Oct. 8.
Night flights between Nanking and Shanghai on Wednesdays and Saturdays are being planned by the Eurasia Aviation Corporation. The flights will be made by the JU 52 tri-motored airplane recently purchased from Germany.

This airplane, it will be noted, is on the regular run between Shanghai and Chengtu via Nanking, Chongchow, Sian, and Hanchung. The Shanghai-Chengtu trip is made in one day. Leaving Shanghai on Tuesday, the airplane reaches Chengtu the same day, and returns to Shanghai on Wednesday. It also leaves Shanghai for Chengtu on Friday, and returns on Saturday.

PUBLIC INTEREST

The Shanghai-Chengtu air service is growing in favour with the public. In view of the fact that the route lies across varied historic and scenic areas.

On returning from Chengtu to Shanghai every Wednesday and Saturday, it is planned, the airplane will make the Nanking-Shanghai section of the trip by night. Facilities for night flights, including a powerful beacon, are to be installed at the Lunghua Aerodrome.

ROAD CONDITIONS

An important point: Out of 1,500 accidents, "road conditions" are given as the main cause in only eight cases. There is no doubt that road conditions, in the broadest sense, were to blame ten times as often. To take one example, we found that 127 cyclists were killed cross-roads or road junctions. Are not such places—all too often blind and utterly unsuited to modern traffic—properly classified under "road conditions?" Merely to count in this category surface that may be slippery or badly pot-holed is ridiculous.

Has it, we wonder, ever occurred to Mr. Leslie Hore-Bellish that the road casualty lists to which he gives such great publicity week by week are about the worst possible testimonial to successive Governments, and especially to his own Ministry? Every list that is blazoned abroad makes one wonder how many victims' lives would have been saved if the roads had been modernised to keep pace with traffic requirements. Instead of "getting a move on," our rulers talk with magnificent grandiloquence of Five-Year Plans. It is months since this flood oratory first began to flow, but what evidence have we that there is action behind the spate of words?

We know that it is not the Minister of Transport's business in "initiate great schemes of road building, but it is" his duty to see that those schemes are prepared by the 1412 authorities who are supposed to look after our highways. And, if he cannot get them to move, it is his duty to make himself thoroughly unpleasant to his colleagues in the Government until such time as he is granted the power to "force" the local authorities into action. Five-Year Plans in pigeon-holes in Whitehall desks are about as useful in the saving of life on the roads as are the prophecies said to be readable by running a foot-rule over the Great Pyramid.

This we can tell Mr. Hore-Bellish: the weekly toll of the roads will continue, and, with the increase in traffic, it will grow, so long as the presents system persists of expecting fast-moving traffic to travel safely on highways designed for the vehicle speeds of fifty years ago.

REPAIR WORK STARTED

Chengchow, Oct. 1.
Work for the repair of the Yellow River breached dykes at Tungchung in western Shantung will be started in a week's time, according to Mr. Kung Hsiang-yung, Vice-Chairman of the Yellow River Conservancy Board and concurrently member of the Standing Committee of the National Water Conservancy Commission, who arrived here yesterday from Kaiyue, provincial capital of Honan.

WHY NOT THREE DOORS?

The Old Number

For some not very obvious reason car designers always seem antagonistic to unsymmetrical fittings. Perhaps it is for this reason that a saloon body with three doors has not been standardised. There have been open two-seaters with a single door, saloons and open cars with two doors, and, of course, the normal four-entrance type.

This is the more curious because the three-door arrangement would have many advantages, and since only one-side of a car is visible at a time it would not impair the appearance of the car. After all, no one seems to object to a single filling orifice to the rear tank, or a steering wheel mounted well over to the right, though both these features are unsymmetrical and, in the case of the fuel filler, at any rate, a duplication would be a distinct advantage. It is already used on Renault and Citroen cars, for example.

However, turning to the question of three doors, a reader of "The Autocar," Mr. S. W. Nobbs, of Norwich, raises the discussion, putting forward the following advantages in favour of the odd number. Three doors would, he claims, combine ease of entrance and exit for the driver, with a wide giving fuller side vision than is possible with the four-door type. It is also suggested that production costs could be slightly less than for a full four-door saloon body.

It would seem that Mr. Nobbs is not alone in his opinion, since he has taken the trouble to submit it to a number of fellow motorists, and forwards us a list of about 120 signatures in favour of the design.

It would be interesting to hear the views of readers on this subject, since there is nothing mechanically or commercially unsound in the suggestion, and only possibly its very simplicity and obviousness have prevented its previous raising.

NOT ORIGINAL

The idea is not quite original, for "Cooper's Vehicle Journal" in 1920, when an associate journal of "The Autocar," published the plans of a three-door saloon, but in that case two doors gave access to the rear seats only, and one, on the near side, to the front compartment.

Such an arrangement would, of course, be chiefly of benefit on the smaller type of saloon car, where considerations of wheel-base limit door width of two entrances are to be provided on each side. There are, of course, other ways out of the difficulty, one of which is put forward by another reader, Mr. Charles Pryor, of Tunbridge Wells. This reader has designed, and provisionally patented a door opening either to the front or to the rear. This is achieved by a set of hinges placed on each side of the door, and so arranged that the hinge pins may be disengaged from their sockets above and below the door by the operation of a central lever or handle. As each set of hinges disengages in opposite directions it is impossible for the door to be lifted from its hinges. When the door is closed the hinge pins are in mid position, and the door is therefore automatically locked. It is possible that the use of such a door would be possible in conjunction with a three-door design, thus obtaining all the advantages of a wide entrance for the driver, full vision to the right side, and a separate means of entrance for rear-seat passengers.

A door which opened "both ways" was exhibited at the Paris Salon a few years back.

MR. DYNAMITE

Edmund Lowe resumes the wack-cracking and fast-romancing that has made him famous, in Dashiell Hammett's newest screen story "Mr. Dynamite" opening tomorrow at the Queen's Theatre.

Lowe portrays the role of a dynamic detective who solves a series of baffling murders in one of the biggest cities in America. The film produced by Universal contains some of the most unique situations ever written. It is a murder mystery story. Elaborately produced and cleverly directed by Alan Crosland, one of Hollywood's "ace" megaphones, "Mr. Dynamite" boasts an array of beautiful sets, including a gambling establishment, which is patterned after the famous Casino at Monte Carlo. Much of the action takes place in the beautiful and costly mansion of a celebrated concert pianist who is murdered while playing the organ in his home.

This picture serves to introduce Jean Dixon, noted Broadway stage star, who begins a long term contract with Universal with this production. It also marks the biggest screen role to date for Verna Hillie, newest Universal contract player and the American screen return of Victor Varconi, popular silent screen star.

CURLY TOP

From the dull and drab life of a small town orphanage to a sunny, palatial mansion in Southampton, adequately sums up the quick rise to luxury and happiness enjoyed by Shirley Temple in her new picture "Curly Top," now at the King's Theatre.

In this new Fox Film comedy-drama with music, Shirley, along with Rochelle Hudson, who portrays the role of her big sister, are adopted by John Boles and taken from an orphanage to his palatial summer home.

Shirley and Rochelle enter upon their new life with all the joy of two youngsters in a dreamland of happiness. Shirley's new-found happiness blossoms forth into laughter, song and dance and soon her charm and childish pranks from the foundation of a delightful romance between John Boles and taken from an orphanage to his palatial summer home.

In "Curly Top," Shirley's talents are given full sway and audiences will come under her enchanting spell when she sings "Animal Crackers in My Soup" and "When I Grow Up."

John Boles sings two of the hit numbers in the film. They are "It's All So New To Me" and "The Theme Number," "Curly Top." Rochelle Hudson, who makes her singing debut in this picture, sings "The Simple Things in Life."

Mary Pickford May Appear Again

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Sept. 30. The captains and the queens of cinema are descending upon London in ever-increasing multitudes. Mr. Sidney Kent has come to elaborate the plans of Fox-Twentieth Century, who propose to spend a million on British-made films next year. Mr. Jesse Lasky, than whom there is no more intelligent and colourful personality in the whole film business, has announced his partnership with Miss Mary Pickford, with whom he will make a picture at Denham (London Films' new studios) in May next. The film will be "Casanova," starring a new discovery, Nino Martinez, a tenor whom Mr. Lasky says he discovered, lost, then found again—on the radio set in his car.

Naturally, one of the first questions put to him was—Will Miss Pickford appear on the screen once more? His reply, "Perhaps—If she can find a story suitable to her present age, appearance, and personality," was only to be expected.

MORE CRITICAL PUBLIC?

Mr. Lasky is delighted at the emergence of British films from obscurity to world prominence. He has some complimentary things to say about Mr. Alexander Korda and his position in Hollywood: esteem (Mr. Korda is now on the board of United Artists) and some interesting things about picture production.

The public, he avers, is now grown sharply critical. Its interest in films has grown to a point where it can actually "sense" a good film before it has been shown. This is proved by receipts at New York premieres, which show a remarkable discrepancy between a first-rate first night and an indifferent one. The closest attention is being paid to British tastes—witness "Copperfield," "Bengal Lancer," "Clive of India," and the "Tale of Two Cities" and "Mutiny of the Bounty" yet to come. The latter picture cost £400,000, and M.G.-M. rely on recovering the bulk of its production costs from Britain.

Sixteen months ago very few big American stars would have unequivocally assured the press that they wanted to make British pictures. To-day there are few who will not. By way of exchange, Miss Jessie Matthews and her husband soon leave for Hollywood. She will play opposite Robert Montgomery, with Clifton Webb as her dancing partner.

AT THE FOX STUDIOS

I paid a brief visit to the Fox Studios at Wembley last Monday, writes a correspondent. Fox are the first of the quota-makers to realise that the £6,000 "quota-quickie" is not good enough. They are now spending a great deal more time and money on a series of melodramas. Miss Tamara Desni, who has appeared twice with Jack Hulbert, is the star of a film about the jealousy engendered between two brothers by a dancer. Mr. Hugh Brooke wrote the story and acts an important part. Among others on the set, I saw Mr. Charles Quatermaine, Miss Olga Lindo, Mr. Morton Selton, and Miss Viola Compton. Mr. Bernard Vorhaus directs.

Miss Desni is a Russian, and finds her nationality something of a handicap in pursuing a film career. Ministry of Labour regulations require intermittent retreats to the Continent at inconveniently frequent intervals, but she, too, has put her faith in British rather than French or American studios. On the Continent her Russian facility for speaking many tongues (French, German and Italian) has set a premium on her services, but she prefers England, "where films are made more calmly."

There is only one sound-studio at Wembley, and that not very large. One was deeply impressed by the ingenuity with which every available inch of space was used. There was a hall and staircase, a drawing-room, and a library. There was a theatre set and the interior of a first class carriage. Outside, on the Fox football pitch, a railway cutting was being prepared with real sleepers and wooden rails. On the floor there were actors, the director and his staff, carpenters and electricians, a troupe of dancers rehearsing on the theatre set, and all with a tenth of the confusion that I have seen in larger studios. Certainly there was less waste.

LAUGHTON IN "LES MISERABLES"

Next week heralds in "Les Misérables" (Hollywood version). This is a remarkable film in several respects. First, for the way in which A. P. Lipscombe has extracted the essentials from so bulky a tale and compressed them within the compass of a normal film. Secondly, for Boleaslavsky's strong and colourful direction. Thirdly, for Charles Laughton's implacable Javert and Cedric Hardwicke's lovely cameo of Bishop Bienvenut.

Freddie March tends to over-act in the leading role, but when under control almost reaches Laughtonian levels. The other players are completely subordinated by this trio. Critics of films are prone to over-easy enthusiasms about good acting. We see so much that is bad and still more which is not acting at all. But after "Ruggles of Red Gap," Laughton's Javert establishes him as one of the greatest and most versatile screen stars of our day.

"Lawrence of Arabia" is a reasonably interesting record of achievement, but fragmentary and uneven in quality, and one which will cause the apostles of Griersonian "documentary" to wriggle in their seats. The recording is profoundly uninspired. With it recorded quite absorbing. With it there is a revival of "The Vagabond King," one of the best early musicals, and a very interesting contrast in technique with "Naughty Marietta." Both films star Jeanette MacDonald.

LONDON BLAZE

Hundreds Watch From Boats

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Sept. 30. While tongues of flame were leaping from windows, and crashing roofs were sending up cascades of sparks, 400 firemen yesterday fought the most spectacular fire in London for many years.

The fire broke out about 3.30 p.m. in an eight-storeyed warehouse at Colonial Wharf, High-street, Wapping. Despite the heroic efforts of the firemen, who poured water on the flames from river-boats, water towers, and 40 engines, the outbreak was still burning early this morning. Just before midnight it seemed that the efforts of the firemen would be rewarded. The fire wall had stood up to a tremendous blaze. But then it apparently attained such a white heat that the cargo on the other side caught fire.

£1,000,000 CARGO
The blaze, which had lessened considerably, heightened, and fresh hoses were quickly brought into operation by the brigades, and the firemen were increased in numbers. It seemed that the whole stock, which contained cargo valued at nearly £1,000,000, might be burned before the conflagration ended.

Flames shooting 100ft high and leaping across the streets made an awe-inspiring sight. The thoroughfares were bathed in a red glow. London Bridge, Tower Bridge, and both banks of the Thames were lined many feet deep with spectators.

Pleasure boats, with hundreds of passengers, anchored in mid-stream. They were surrounded by rowing boats laden with sightseers. From the river the outbreak resembled an enormous firework display as the showers of sparks shot into the air.

MOLTEN RUBBER

In the warehouse were: 40,000 cases, containing 400 tons of rubber. Thousands of chests of tea. Hundreds of cases of wines and spirits in bond.

Rivers of tea, boiled by the flames in water from the hoses, flowed into the streets and flooded hundreds of houses. Lighted streams of molten rubber ran from the windows.

The blue and green flames of the wine and spirits gave an eerie touch to the scene. Five hours after the outbreak began—at 8.30—the eight floors of the eastern portion of the warehouse were ablaze, and the 8-storey wall fronting the river fell.

The fire had burnt its way downwards through seven floors and undermined the bottom of the wall. As the 80ft-high pile of masonry, more than 20ft wide on the river front, began to totter, firemen on the river leapt for their lives.

With a roar like that of thunder the stonework crashed over the wharf into the river, almost burying three lighters. A tremendous blaze followed, and a vivid light played across the river.

As the tide rose the fire floats were able to get closer to the blazing building. The powerful jet from the Massey Shaw, London's latest fire float, which was attending its first big fire, was reinforced by those from two other floats.

LIGHTERS ON FIRE
Five lighters caught fire. They were all on the mud of the river.

WINGS IN THE DARK

Motion picture studios like to do things in a big way. That is why the patients of a prominent Hollywood optician, Dr. Henry Nesburn, recently received notice that the doctor had temporarily discontinued his practice for three days. His entire office, and every bit of equipment had been transported to a sound stage at the Paramount studios.

Engaged as a technical adviser on "Wings in the Dark" starring Myrna Loy and Cary Grant, Nesburn discovered that one scene called for a "slit lamp" was a complicated piece of optical apparatus. Since one of the few "slit lamps" in Hollywood was in his possession, he volunteered it.

The picture "Wings in the Dark" is closing to-day at the Queen's Theatre.

THE COTTON CONFERENCE IN BRUSSELS

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Sept. 30. The English members of the Committee of the International Federation of Cotton Spinners and Manufacturers' Associations leave England to-morrow morning to attend a meeting of the committee in Brussels on Monday. Among the subjects to be discussed are "The effect of monetary policies upon the cotton trade" and "Cotton yarn conventions," both of which were left over for further discussion from the congress in Rome in May.

Mr. W. M. Wiggins, president of the Federation Master Cotton Spinners, who is also president of the International Cotton Federation, will occupy the chair. The English representatives accompanying him will be Mr. Fred Holroyd, a past president of the International Federation; Mr. W. H. Catterall, an ex-president of the Master Spinners' Federation; Mr.

WELCOME HOME

Two lovely ladies vie for the select attentions of James Dunn and provide some embarrassing situations and an incalculable number of rib-tickling laughs for Fox Film's comedy picture, "Welcome Home" which comes to the Alhambra to-morrow.

As a charming scoundrel, one brains and boss of a quartette of trick swindlers, Dunn comes home to Elmdale, the little town from which he started out into the world. The first person he sees is Rosina Lawrence, the girl he had forgotten; but with whom he renews old acquaintance in a hurry.

The home town boys rove Dunn in on a grandiose scheme for luring an old millionaire into putting his money into the town, and Dunn sends for his old associates to help him put over the deal. When they arrive, they turn out to be Raymond Walburn, a stock swindler; William Frawley, who prospects gold from teeth he pulls as a phoney dentist, and Arline Judge a smart girl.

Of course, Miss Judge objects to Dunn's attachment for Rosina Lawrence, and the boys go to work on the local citizens. Soon they have themselves involved in more trouble than they can handle, and Dunn's brains and luck are put to work saving them. How the does it is revealed in a chuckle-filled surprise climax.

J. Ashurst, secretary of the Cotton Spinners' and Manufacturers' Association; Mr. John Fosson, hon. secretary, and Mr. N. S. Pearce general secretary.

Mr. Wentworth Schofield, a member of the English Federation General Committee, has been co-opted a member of the International General Committee, has been co-opted a member of the International Committee for this meeting in order that he can take part in the discussion on monetary policies—a subject on which he spoke before the Congress in May.

HEROISM AT WHARF
Firemen showed great gallantry. At considerable risk some took hoses on to the roofs of adjoining wharves, and others worked from tall water-towers, from which they had to be called away because of their danger.

Hoses had to be carried across vessels drawn up by the wharf side. Gas masks had to be worn because of fumes.

All the time the firemen were in peril from falling brickwork, and when coping stones crashed many had narrow escapes. Fireman Oliver, of Shadwell Brigade, was injured, but was able to go home after treatment at St. George's Hospital, Wapping.

Nothing remained of the eastern portion of the building, which extended more than 100 yards.

Scores of hoses, on shore and on the river, were still pouring thousands of gallons of water into the blazing interior. Every possible jet from the mains and powerful streams from the river, pumped by the fire floats' water guns, were playing on the building.

A fire brigade officer told a representative of "The Daily Telegraph" that the difficulties of the firemen were increased because oil stored on the top floor was constantly seeping down into merchandise, also ablaze, on the floors below.

Firemen steadily drove the flames down floor by floor. The brigade will probably be at work until late this morning.

PEOPLE'S FORTITUDE
Mr. Barnett Janner, Liberal M.P. for Whitechapel, spent more than nine hours in the vicinity of the fire, reassuring local residents and providing assistance. He stated there was no fire engine in the Wapping area.

"I have repeatedly agitated for an engine, or engines, to be stationed there," he said "but without result."

"The nearest brigade is at Shadwell, but Shadwell is separated from Wapping by bridges, and there is always the danger that these bridges may be congested."

"The multitude of the people in the thickly populated residential area surrounding the building has been remarkable. They have had many hours of quite serious danger and inconvenience, and absolute refusal to budge from their homes or to recognise any danger."

CABLES "SWHONIS"

THE CRIMINAL SESSIONS

CARRIER OF ARMS

Stating that there too great a prevalence of this type of thing going on in the Colony, His Honour the Chief Justice, Sir Athol Macgregor sentenced an unemployed Chinese to 18 months with hard labour, for the unlawful possession of a load revolver, and four rounds of ammunition at the Criminal Sessions yesterday.

Defendant, Yip Sau, when given the option of going into the witness box or making a statement from the dock, said that he had nothing to say but left the case "entirely in your Lordships hands."

The following comprised the jury: Messrs. D. McFerran (foreman), M. H. Large, L. May, E. F. Shea, J. L. Alves, J. B. Gonsalves, and Leung Shu Po. Mr. J. A. Fraser Assistant Attorney General prosecuted, while the defendant was not legally represented.

In presenting the facts of the case, Mr. Fraser said that defendant was seen by two districts watchmen in Des Voeux Road Central near the entrance of Queen Victoria Street, acting in a suspicious manner, whereupon they went up to him and searched him. Under his jacket, wrapped up in the girdle, they found a revolver and four rounds of ammunition. Defendant claimed that he had been given the revolver by a man named Chun Sau to take to Wan Chai. At the time of his arrest the man had stepped onto a tram "Island" as if he wished to board a tram bound for West Point.

FALSE ADDRESS

When taken to the station, and subsequently handed over to Inspector K. W. Andrew, attached to the District Watchman Force, accused stated that he had been instructed to take the revolver to a house, No. 19 Tai Yuen Street, where he would find Chan Sau. When taken there, defendant failed to find Sau, and in addition to this the inmates of the flat said that they were not acquainted with the latter. They also added that Chan did not reside there. Defendant then stated that he did not know where Sau lived.

After evidence had been taken from the two district watchmen Inspector Andrew, and Sergt. J. E. Scott, police armorer, the case for the prosecution was closed.

VERDICT OF GUILTY

Addressing the jury His Honour after touching on several points of the case, said that if the jury thought that accused had been an innocent and unwilling carrier of arms for someone else, it seemed to him (His Honour) that the sum of $5 alleged by the accused to have been agreed upon, as his fee seemed rather excessive. A revolver could be sent by parcel post for a considerably less sum than that stated. The jury did not retire, but deliberated for a few minutes before coming to a unanimous vote that accused was "guilty."

SHARP WARNING

Sentence of three years hard labour was meted out to Lau Kau, aged 55, when he appeared before the Chief Justice, Sir Athol Macgregor, at the Criminal Sessions yesterday on a charge of importing 352 counterfeit Hong Kong five cent pieces from China.

Chan Cho, 25, unemployed, was also given a three years sentence when he pleaded guilty to importing 98 counterfeit Hong Kong five-cent pieces from Canton to Hong Kong.

Mr. Fraser for the Crown, said the obvious inference was that both accused were carriers.

The Judge remarked that he would pass heavy sentence month by month for this type of offence "until it penetrates the intelligence of those people that the game is not worth the candle."

ROBBERS CAUGHT

At the Criminal Sessions yesterday, several cases of robbery came before the Chief Justice, Sir Athol Macgregor.

Mr. J. A. Fraser, Assistant Attorney General prosecuted for the Crown in all the cases.

Leung Ting-ka, 24, unemployed, pleaded not guilty to a charge of robbing Chui Ho 23, widow, employed as a servant at 11, Caine Road, of a gold finger ring and a pair of earrings, on September 19. Another man, Shum Ngan, 24 years, pleaded guilty.

The following jury was empanelled to try the case against Leung Ting-ka: Messrs. R. C. Webb (foreman), W. Hong Sling, E. J. J. Spradbery, A. J. Bush, J. A. Fisher, H. Wiele and Abdul Curram.

Mr. Fraser explained that it was a case of aggravated robbery as alleged her four men took part. They gagged the woman and when she entered the Government Civil Hospital she was suffering from strangulation which was in the opinion of the doctor very serious.

In making a statement from the dock the accused said that the robbery was only a momentary impulse as they wanted to return to Swatow.

Without retiring the jury returned a verdict guilty. Passing sentence of five years hard labour, the Chief Justice commented on the brutal treatment which was inflicted on the woman. Shum Ngan was sentenced to four and a half years imprisonment.

SHEUNG SHUI CASE

A Hakka, Chan Shing, who is at present serving twelve months for a breach of the deportation order, was sentenced to four years hard labour when he pleaded guilty to an indictment of robbery at Shek Wu-hui village, Sheung Shui district, on September 8, the complainant being Man Sing, who was robbed of Hong Kong and Canton money and three tins of condensed milk.

Mr. Fraser said that it must be stated in the accused's favour that as soon as he was arrested he admitted everything. It was a similar robbery to the previous case and it was unfortunate that this type of crime was becoming increasingly prevalent in that district. It was at the cross-roads in Sheung-shui and was particularly liable to attacks from robbers over the Chinese border.

BARE-FACED ROBBERY

"It amounts to a terrorisation of the neighbourhood," remarked Mr. Fraser in applying to his Lordship to pass a heavy sentence on Cheong Loi, who pleaded guilty to robbery by two or more at Tung Tau Village, Au Tau district, on June 23 last. They robbed Leung Keng-chuen, accountant of the Man Fung Shing bean curd shop, of a wallet, clock and $32.80 in money; Leung Lam and Lui Shap of clothing.

Mr. Fraser said that it was seldom that he applied for heavy sentence but he did so in this case in view of the bold and bare-faced character of the robbery. All the men were armed and carried torches. They robbed the house with all the lights on. The nearest police station practically overlooked the place.

Five years' hard labour was imposed.

CHEATING AN OLD LADY

Ip Lim Wan, (43) unemployed Chinese, of No 223 Ki Lung Street, stood his trial at the Criminal Sessions yesterday before Mr. Justice R. E. Lindsell, the Puisne Judge, on a charge of uttering a forged promissory note on April 17, 1935, purporting to be made by Chiu Sit Shi (74) a widow living at No. 28 Gilman Street.

The following comprised the jury: Messrs. O. B. Raven (Foreman), H. H. W. Sander, Li Wai-fun, V. T. Low, F. Carvalho C. J. Triggs and F. M. Silva.

Mr. W. J. Lockhart Smith, Assistant Crown Solicitor, in outlining the case spoke at great length and said that the case which the prosecution had compiled against the accused went back to March 1929. The plot was mainly attributed to a man described as "Chan", whose whereabouts were not known.

In March, six years ago the widow visited a solicitor's office to devise means of protecting her property and there she met Chan in the capacity of a clerk. On his advice she gave him two photographs and made a finger-print on some blank paper for the purpose of registering her property at the land office.

The blank sheet of paper was then made out in the form of a Promissory Note in favour of the accused and bearing the name and finger-print of the old lady. The idea originally was to wait for the death of the latter who was even then at an advanced age, and afterwards to present the note as a claim against her estate.

STUBBORN OLD AGE

However, the old lady lived and it became apparent that unless something was done the "note" would become invalid by the lapse of time—the note only being good if presented within six years.

Chan and accused in August, 1934, went to Messrs. Wilkinson and Grist and instructed them to issue a writ for $1,500 on the Promissory Note, together with $2,027 accrued interest.

In September 1934 accused went to court where judgment was given for him against the old lady who, ignorant of the whole plot, was no represented.

THE NEXT STEP

The next step was to get the money, and accordingly a writ of execution was secured by Chan who said he was acting for accused. Mr. Millington, head bailiff, went to Chiu Sit-shi's house and there, for the first time, the old lady became aware of the debt she was alleged to owe, the allegedly faked service of the writ on the dummy and the judgment that had been given against her in her absence. Mr. Millington suspected something was wrong and the matter was brought before the judge. Judgment was suspended, an enquiry was set afoot and the old lady then recalled the incident, five years before, of attaching her finger-print to a blank sheet of paper.

OLD LADY CALLED

Chiu Sit-shi gave evidence bearing out the opening statement as far as she knew, and after further evidence was called, the case was adjourned.

CONSERVANCY WORK

Harnessing The Floods

Construction Of Big Reservoirs

Nanking, (By Mail)

Concerted efforts on the part of various water conservancy organs for a period of from five to ten years in harnessing the floods and turning them to profitable account would eventually help in the economic and agricultural development of China, declared Mr. Fu Yu-lin, Chairman of the Yangtze River Conservancy Commission, in a recent address on water conservancy work in China at the National Central University here.

Since the water conservancy organs were placed under the control of the National Economic Council by the Central Government in July last year, already noticeable progress, Mr. Fu said, has been made in water conservancy work in the country. Continuous exertion of efforts would relieve China of her present flood catastrophe, and enhance her conservancy work.

According to Mr. Fu, the main water conservancy organs now under the control of the National Economic Council include the North China Water Conservancy Commission, the Hwangho Conservancy Commission, the Hwai River Conservancy Commission and the Yangtze River Conservancy Commission.

WORK REVIEWED

Reviewing the work of these conservancy organs, Mr. Fu stated that the North China Water Conservancy Commission has worked fundamental measures for the conservancy of the Yellow River, based upon a detailed survey of the conditions of the river. In accordance with the measures the commission is constructing big reservoirs for keeping the surplus water of the Yellow River, and washing off the silt by conducting filth water from the Yungting River to the former.

CHINA'S SORROW

Thwarting Conservancy Commission, Mr. Fu continued, is also making out a fundamental plan for conservancy of the Hwangho, which has long been known as "China's Sorrow." In general there are now two schemes of plan concerning the conservancy of this river.

One school holds that the flow of water should be diverted into several channels so as to reduce its volume and force. The other school advocates the concentration of the currents of the river in order to wash off the sand deposits in the river. The commission is now doing experiments with both theories, making careful research in the plans formerly used for conservancy of this river.

In accordance with its plans already laid out, the Hwai River Conservancy Commission is conducting a party to the water of the Hwai River into the Yangtze River and opening up old course into the sea. To conduct part of the Hwai River in the Yangtze River three sluice are being constructed at Lih-shien, Hualin and Shaopei, and two movable dams at Sanho - a Chuduang, while for opening up the old course of the Hwai River into the sea the proceeds of the Kiangsu Water Conservancy Bonds, amounting to $7,000,000 have been appropriated and a large number of workers have been recruited in various hsiens in Kiangsu to undertake the work. About one-third of it is reported to have been completed.

THE YANGTZE

Turning to the Yangtze River, Mr. Fu said that this river was formerly considered the most advantageous to people's livelihood. But in 1931 an unprecedented flood occurred in this river and within the short period of about five years another flood even more serious than the preceding one, is now doing havoc to the people.

A fundamental remedial project according to Mr. Fu, is being worked out by the Yangtze River Conservancy Commission, under the following principles:

(1) Gradually widening the lower reaches of the river and closing up all creeks.

(2) Maintaining a definite width and height of the riverbed so as to avoid accumulation of silt and collapses of the banks.

(3) Regulating the flood flow in times of high tides.

(4) Opening a new channel to divert the immense volume of water in the river and dig a canal linking Aochow and Yueh to divert a part of the water of the Tungting Lake into the river.

(5) Maintaining the highest water-reserving capacity in the Tungting and Poyang Lakes and other lakes and tributaries along the river.

The main pieces of engineering work include (1) readjustment of the lower and middle course of the river and the improvement of irrigation on its banks; (2) conservancy of the upper reaches of the river and utilization of its water power; (3) conservancy of the Tungting Lake and its tributaries and mutual regulation of water flow between it and the Yangtze River; (4) conservancy of the Hsiang River and mutual regulation of water flow between it and the Yangtze River; (5) conservancy of the Poyang Lake and regulation of its water flow; and (6) readjustment of the sand-dunes, and repair of dykes, wharves and jetties along the river.

CANALS

Besides the four conservancy organs, above-mentioned, various others, Mr. Fu said, are also exerting their utmost efforts for the improvement of conservancy in China. In view of the scarcity of rain in the highlands in the northwest, the Central Government has in recent years paid great attention to conservancy work there. A network of canals are being built in the northwestern provinces so as to facilitate irrigation and navigation.

In conclusion, Mr. Fu stated that in view of the fact China is still primarily an agricultural country, no efforts should be spared to improve conservancy and irrigation so as to enhance the productive power of the country.

FLOODS SUBSIDING

Hsuehchow, Oct. 20.

The flood scared populace of north-west Kiangsu heaved a sigh of relief to-day, upon hearing the reports that the flood of Lutang, Chungtung and Yen rivers have gradually returned to normalcy.

Although the water level is still registering a slight increase, it does not warrant any serious apprehension.

Meanwhile the investigations of damage caused by the recent over-flooding of the Chungtung River, reveal that 12 villages on both banks of Huangyungtung River including 600 houses and 14,000 mu of farmland, and more than 20 villages bordering Chungtung River, including 1,000 houses and 31,000 mu of farmland have been inundated by the rushing currents.

All schools in the flooded districts have been closed down.

CHURCH APPEAL

Drive For Funds

The Ladies Shamshulpo Matched Church Appeal Fund beg for the enthusiastic support of all Bridge and Mah Jong Tournament which has been organized at the Peninsula Hotel on that date.

The recent movement of 97 families to Shamshulpo has rendered even more acute the problem of any religious teaching or Divine worship for the troops stationed at this Camp. The Army Chaplains have, for some time past, been trying to obtain some sort of building for this purpose but, owing to the temporary nature of this Camp, it has been found financially impossible to do anything from public funds.

Now the Army Church authorities at their own expense are erecting a Matched Church which can seat about 600, and a Committee of Military and Civilian Ladies is trying to raise funds to make that match in every way suitable for its splendid purpose.

Any donation, however small, from people unable to attend on the 31st would be very welcome, and gratefully acknowledged. Contributions may be sent to:

Mrs. Edwin Taylor—410, The Peak.

Mrs. Morris—12, Tak Shing St. Kowloon.

Mrs. Harrison—5, Thorpe Manor, Hong Kong.

Mrs. Bateman—6, Felix Villas, Pokfulam.

Mrs. Smalley—Kowloon Hospital.

Mrs. Davies—Empress Lodge, Kowloon.

Mrs. Fordham—Repulse Bay Hotel.

Don't forget 31st October at 1 p.m. at the Peninsula Hotel.

GOVERNOR GENERAL'S FAREWELL

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Sept. 30.
The retiring Governor General of Canada and Lady Bessborough left Ottawa yesterday to the strains of "Auld Lang Syne" and to the accompaniment of cheers from thousands of people. They are proceeding to Quebec, where they will embark in the Empress of Britain, which leaves for England tomorrow.

A mounted troop of the Princess Louise's Dragoon Guards escorted Lord and Lady Bessborough to the railway station, when a royal salute of 19 guns was fired from Parliament Hill. At the station the detachment of the Governor General's Foot Guards, who formed the guard of honour, was in full-dress scarlet uniform, and, in addition, there were 200 of the Canadian Cameron Highlanders with feather headdress and scarlet tunics.

Lord and Lady Bessborough bade an official farewell to Government officials, diplomats, and others at the station, while their Canadian-born son, the four-year-old George St. Lawrence Ponsonby, kissed and shook hands with a host of small friends.

Lord Bessborough actually remains Governor General until the Empress of Britain leaves Canadian waters, which will be some time on Sunday night. Chief Justice Sir Lyman Duff will be sworn in on Monday as Administrator for the Government with the powers of a governor general until Lord Tweedsmuir (formerly Mr. John Buchan) arrives.

HONG KONG, OCTOBER 22, 1935.

THE NEED FOR CHANGES

Very naturally at this moment of crisis the attention of the world is being given almost exclusively to those passages in Sir Samuel Hoare's speech at Geneva in which, to use the phrase of the "Berliner Tageblatt," the "strong words" of Signor Mussolini are answered by the equally "strong words" of Great Britain.

Nonetheless, it may well happen that in the long run, the most important part of that speech will be found to lie not so much in its clear expression of Great Britain's determination to stand by the League of Nations as in its repeated recognition of the fact that, behind and beyond this merely negative police duty of the League, it must also be used as an instrument for the peaceful effecting of such changes as reason and justice require should be made in a living and therefore continually changing world.

No further excuse then is needed for emphasizing this aspect of Sir Samuel Hoare's speech. While he notes the natural reluctance in the existing position to contemplate the possibilities of changes, he insists that "elasticity is also a part of security." It is not surprising in view of the great part he has recently played in extending self-government to India, that the first change he envisages is a development of the national life of people at present backward. It is, in his opinion, in accordance with the League of Nations ideal, that the more advanced and civilised peoples should foster this growth for "all nations alike have a valuable contribution to make to the common stock of humanity."

A paragraph of excellent wisdom follows, warning against changes demanded by mere national passion (often deliberately accused by Government propaganda) and changes that would create more injustices than they remove, or entail unilateral repudiation of treaties. The task of negotiating change is a delicate one, and can only be properly executed in the international atmosphere of the League of Nations, where the voices of reason and magnanimity have the greatest chance of being heard.

The real test as to whether Great Britain is prepared to welcome proper changes arises over the question of raw materials, of which she possesses a preponderant share. Something, Sir Samuel Hoare acknowledges, should be done to guarantee a fair distribution of the raw materials of industry, and he gave an earnest of his sincerity by adumbrating plans for an international investigation of the question.

"Obviously," however, he concluded, this part of his speech by observing, "such an enquiry needs calm and dispassionate consideration, and calm and dispassionate consideration is impossible in an atmosphere of war and threatnings of war."

BRITISH CONSUL PROTESTS

Against Japanese Action

Peiping, Oct. 21.

Wholesale arrests of Chinese Christians in Mukden and a search of British residents' houses by Japanese police and gendarmes, is reported to have taken place last week, according to foreign despatches received here. The British Consul has lodged a protest.

Among the sixty persons arrested were included Chinese doctors and nurses of the Irish Presbyterian Mission, employees of the British-American Tobacco Company, the compradore of the Hong Kong-Shanghai Banking Corporation, Chinese pastors, teachers and girls' students of a mission school. There followed a search of the houses of the British staff of the B.A.T. by Japanese police.

All those arrested were members of the Yin Fen Fui or One Cent Society, a philanthropic organisation, the members of which contribute on a cent daily for the education of the poor students of the city.

The Japanese appear to have become suspicious of the activities of the organisation however, and the charges against those in custody allege activities of a Communist character.

All those arrested are Christians, connected either with the Young Men's Christian Association or the Irish Presbyterian Mission.

The British Consul-General at Mukden has protested to the local authorities.

NEWS FROM CHINA

NORTH CHINA PROBLEMS

Nanking Government Activity

Nanking, Oct. 21.

His movements cloaked in secrecy, Chiang Kai-shek, the National Government Generalissimo, conferred with officials here to-day.

It was reported he had left the capital secretly but this was denied. Officials said he might proceed to Fenghua tomorrow.

The actual purpose of Chiang's hurried visit here from northwest China was veiled in uncertainty, but officials conceded it was connected with grave problems facing the government which are demanding an early decision.

One report was the Japanese have made new demands, but this was denied in both Chinese and Japanese circles.

While it could not be confirmed officially, it is widely reported that the Nanking government is facing the necessity of re-orienting its policy toward Japan as the result of the recent conference between the Japanese foreign minister, Koki Hirota, and the Chinese ambassador, Chiang Tso-pin.

Authoritative quarters also revealed that the Japanese are asking a check on the expanding power of the former Manchurian warlord, Chang Hsueh-liang. He is at present the chief lieutenant of Chiang Kai-shek in the campaign for the suppression of communism in northwest China. The Japanese, it is declared, object specifically to the transfer of three divisions of the young marshal's former Manchurian troops to North China.

Closely connected with Nanking's dilemma, it is believed are the current conferences with high Japanese diplomatic officials which are continuing at Shanghai. These apparently signalize closer co-operation between the Japanese military and diplomatic branches.

SHANSI MAKES HEADWAY

Highway-Construction

Taiyuan.

Utilization of the people's free labour service is responsible for the present progressive state in highway construction in Shansi province, a recent survey reveals. As a part of the ten-year reconstruction plan mapped out by the Shansi provincial authorities, highway construction in Shansi has progressed by leaps and bounds, especially during the past two years since the enforcement of the people's free labour service scheme.

In addition to the total length of 2,112 li of motor roads constructed from 1920, the year of the calamitous drought in China's northwest, to 1929, as an outcome of the labour relief scheme for the drought victims, 1,538 li of highways have been completed since 1929 onwards making a total of 3,650 li. All the highways thus completed are designated as provincial highways because they have been constructed as the results of the provincial authorities.

To facilitate military transportation in west Shansi in the event of anti-Red operations and to develop further overland communication in the province, the provincial authorities are making plans for the construction of a total of 10,000 li of highways in the near future.

BUS BUSINESS

Construction of more provincial highways has been made the more necessary in view of the fact that bus business has been unfavourably affected since the completion of the Tungpu Railway, running a total number of 247 buses, the Shansi Provincial Bus Company has, for the past few years, reaped an annual receipt of more than $700,000 which is half the figure for the bus business in the whole province. But its business has been seriously hit since the inauguration of the Tungpu Railway early this year.

Construction of roads to link up districts and villages with one another has been progressing in full swing since the enforcement of the people's free labour service last year. Up to the present, a total mileage of 99,823 li has been achieved by the able-bodied male citizens, whose number is estimated at 2,000,000 in the province. The latter do the road-building work during their leisure hours after farming under the supervision of the district magistrates and the village elders.

ITALIANS CAPTURE MANY VALUABLE POSITIONS IN OGADEN PROVINCE

Ethiopians Surrender DEVASTATING ATTACK BY PLANES

Merciless Hail Of Lead

Asmara, October 21.
News of fighting in the southern front which has just reached here indicates that the Italians captured many valuable positions while the Abyssinians have suffered considerably from aerial bombing in which five Italian machines participated.

The harassed tribesmen were swept by machine gun fire from the planes. Buildings in various occupied positions had been previously set on fire by incendiary bombs, thus forcing them into the open to be mown down by a merciless hail of lead.

It is expected that the Italian victory will have a considerable moral effect on the Abyssinians along all fronts, this being the first occasion that Italian planes were brought into use with such deadly effect.

A large number of Abyssinians surrendered and delivered their rifles, which were mostly of European make. It is also stated that the heads of 200 Coptic churches throughout the province made formal submission to the Italian authorities.

Following the Italian successes in Ogaden province to-day, the Abyssinian chieftain Ras Gugsa, who recently turned over to the Italian side, issued a series of proclamations to the people of the province promising generally improved conditions and, in particular, freedom from all taxation.

OFFENSIVE TO BEGIN

Asmara, Oct. 21.
The forthcoming Italian offensive on the northern front was the subject of long deliberations between the Chief of Staff, Marshal Badoglio, and the Commander of the Northern Army, General de Bono, in the headquarters at Adowa after reports received from pilots of reconnaissance planes who on Sunday flew 250 kilometres into Abyssinian territory, penetrating as far as Lake Tsana in the north-west.

The Italian offensive it is understood, will be launched early this week. Bounties were distributed to the Askaris who had distinguished themselves during the attack on Adowa as well as to the veterans of the battle of Adowa in 1896.

Asmara, Oct. 20.
Everything appears to be in readiness for the indicated Italian advance towards Makale, but there is good reason to believe, also, that the attack, when it comes, will be met with determined opposition. Makale will not fall without a battle.

Reconnaissance planes of the Italian Army in the north, under the command of General de Bono, report that the troops marching under the Ethiopian chieftain, Ras Kassa, are moving up in considerable numbers from the south-west, apparently heading for Makale.

As they move, more men occupy the positions they are vacating. Meanwhile, in preparation for their assault, the Italians are gradually occupying the strategic positions in the mountains around Adigrat.

The popularity of Il Duce is in evidence in the huge canvas portraits of him which are hoisted on all occupied positions where any fighting has occurred.

ANGLO-ITALIAN RELATIONS

Rome Satisfaction

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Rome, Oct. 20.
With undisguised satisfaction, the Italian press records that the international situation which had become extremely tense in the past few days, without Italy being to blame in any way, has now gone and the relaxation is partly through the conversation between Signor Mussolini and Sir Eric Drummond, and partly by the exceedingly important announcement of the British Premier Mr. Stanley Baldwin at Worcester on Saturday, who declared unequivocally that England was not hostile to the Fascist regime, and that Britain had no designs on bringing about Mussolini's removal.

The Italian press quotes largely from the foreign papers to prove the correctness of its own deductions from the facts of the situation, and expresses the view that the most important of other features of the new position, is that the Geneva sanction discussions are suspended till the end of October, so that the diplomatic centre of gravity is no longer in Geneva, but in Paris, London and Rome.

The semi-official Sunday paper "La Voce d'Italia" declares that special significance is attached to the assurances given by Britain because it is accompanied by facts that will contribute to the relaxation of the tension caused by the systematic massing of the British fighting forces in the Mediterranean.

Admittedly, "La Voce" continues, these official declarations do not make everything clear. There cannot be any doubt that the action against Italy in Geneva resulted above all from Britain's initiative. If Britain ceased, then Geneva would cease.

Although from London many stubborn and unyielding voices are heard, "La Voce" declares that the abandonment of hope in the Abyssinian question, will now be treated with more sense of justice than heretofore.

FRENCH PRESS VIEWS

Paris, Oct. 20.
Mr. Stanley Baldwin's speech delivered at Worcester on Saturday particularly the passage emphasising that Britain does not want war but will be ready for reconciliation at the first available opportunity, and has not the slightest intention of exploiting the Italian-Abyssinian conflict to overthrow the Fascist regime, has brought about a relaxation of the tension in the Anglo-Italian relations, is the opinion expressed by all the Paris Sunday newspapers.

"Le Matin" writes that nothing could be more encouraging for M. Laval's efforts at reconciliation whose significance despite the clarification of the situation in the Mediterranean could not be underestimated.

The Nationalist paper "Le Jour" assures its readers, that Mr. Baldwin's speech was of the utmost significance, and will be received by public opinion with the most lively satisfaction. Almost the whole of the press is optimistic in speaking of the complete removal of all differences of opinion between France and Britain through the note handed over on Friday night, but it is not worthy that several Paris organs attempt to prove the existence of differences between the British Government and Mr. Anthony Eden, declaring that it is Mr. Baldwin who really determines the British League of Nations policy and not Mr. Eden, who in Geneva is fostering Imperialistic aims.

BOMBAY MARKET UPSET

FASCISM IN FRANCE

Decrees To Deal With Menace

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press")

Decrees against the "menace of Fascist fighting organisations" in France are now being drafted by the Minister of Justice, M. Bernard, according to "l'Ouvrier" which, however, is the only paper furnishing this information.

Processions, demonstrations and meetings of all kinds in the streets or public places in future will have to receive the sanction of the competent Burgomaster, who must be informed at least three days before being announced to prospective participants.

Such demonstrations can then be forbidden, if considered prejudicial to public order and anybody nevertheless partaking in a prohibited meeting will be fined from sixteen to two thousand francs.

The same punishment will be laid down for giving intentionally false information as to the nature or object of the demonstration, while the organisation concerned can be dissolved.

Anybody participating in a permitted demonstration, but found to be in possession of arms, will be sentenced to imprisonment from six months to two years.

The second decree, said to be in preparation, deals with sale of arms on which in future a high premium will be levied with the exception of sporting guns.

In addition, declares "l'Ouvrier", possession of arms will be prohibited unless permission has been obtained from the police.

SANCTIONS PROPOSALS APPROVED

Financial And Economic Measures

London, October 21.

The Minister for League of Nations Affairs, Mr. Anthony Eden, arrived in London from Geneva last night. Most of the chief delegates of the other powers have also left Geneva where, for the present, their work is completed, measures of collective economic action against Italy having received the final approval of the Committee of Co-ordination on Saturday evening.

The Co-ordination Committee and also the Committee of Eighteen will meet again at Geneva on October 31 to decide the date of application of measures agreed upon.

Meanwhile the Governments of the participating States have been asked to inform the Secretary General of the League not later than October 28 of the measures they are taking to put the recommendations into effect.

These recommendations are set out in five proposals of which three were approved on Saturday. Proposals one and two are designed to cut off supplies of armaments and munitions from Italy and to reopen them for benefit of Abyssinia and to secure withholding of financial assistance from Italy.

Under proposals three, four and five, which were approved on Saturday, the Nations pledged themselves, in principle, firstly to refuse to receive Italian exports; secondly, to refuse to sell to Italy any articles of use in war included in a comprehensive list; and thirdly, to give each other mutual aid and support so as to minimise as far as possible the effect of the embargo on the nations enforcing it.

Indications have been received here in the meantime, that the Abyssinian Government is in no wise satisfied with the imposition of economic sanctions against Italy and it is believed that further appeals will be made to the League in this connection.

Off to school with Health and Energy

CHILDREN need so much nourishment if they are to be healthy and happy. They use up energy in spendthrift fashion at their play—and every ounce of energy spent has to be made good from nourishment. They are growing, physically and mentally, and nourishment is essential for healthy growth. This, too, is the season when infectious illnesses are most prevalent.

Let your children start the day fortified by an abundant store of energy and vitality. Give them delicious "Ovaltine" as their breakfast beverage. Then they will be quick at their lessons, fond of play, and will grow up with sound nerves, alert minds and healthy bodies.

Make sure they have their "Ovaltine" every day—for breakfast, to give them the energy they need for the day—before going to bed, to rebuild and restore their tired little bodies. Then you can be quite sure that they will grow up strong and healthy.

RACING TO CHEUNG CHAU

In Westerlies Or Variables

(BY "SHELL BACK").

The Royal Hong Kong Yacht Club held their second pool race for Cruisers last Sunday, over a 25 mile course from the Yacht Club round Cheung Chau to Port and back. Conditions were light with variable winds changing from East to South West and finally back to South East, and the result was a win for Capt. P. F. Foley's yacht "Tern", sailed by Major McIntyre and Mr. Portman, who thoroughly deserved their victory.

Sixteen yachts crossed the line at 10.00 a.m. or so soon after as their helmsmen could get them over, with a light Easterly breeze and spinnakers set to Port or Starboard according to inclination and reset periodically on the opposite side according to inspiration or energy, or not reset owing to lack of it. In fact it was a glorious morning with a gentle baby breeze, when serious earnest yacht racing seems to be verging on bad form and when the eleven o'clock beer gets unaccountably promoted to ten-thirty.

However, in any yacht Club, there always seem to be some members who would sail a soap box across the Atlantic just for fun, so in deference to these heartless the fleet meandered gently down the harbour towards the Sulphur Channel. On the way along several fresh sights were seen, amongst them Mr. Spiller's new four corner "Nord Wester" which was out racing for the first time, apart from being the newest addition to the four ton class her chief claim to fame is a gaff with about three feet spare at the top. Mr. G. G. Wood's yawl "West Wind" also made her first appearance in cruiser racing and looked very spruce with cream coloured paint and cream sails, but that was as far as it went, since it was not her day and she slowed quietly off to leeward, finally finishing up in Silver Mine Bay where I fancy she gave up.

THE "NORSEMAN"

Mr. Nicolson was out in "Norseman" complete with a new suit of sails of improbable outline but apparently efficient driving power, since at the Sulphur Channel Norseman was either second or third boat, however the strain of showing the fleet the way to Cheung Chau through alternative "drifts" and light pulls of Westerly wind appeared too much for her helmsmen and accompanied by La Cigale, she then gave up.

After a run down the harbour and a tricky beat through the Sulphur Channel, the prospects of anyone finishing the course before 7.30 p.m. the hour required to make the race count, did not look too bright. It was a case of faint hearts not winning far ladies and a number were faint and gave up: the stern and rugged yachtsmen, however, carried on. Mr. Lubbert's "Azuma" was in the lead, having steered a most improbable course North of Green Island, "Wanderer" was next, away South towards the head of Lamma Island, then followed a string of four tonners hot on the trail, Monsoon, Sai Long, Tern, Penguin, Nord Wester, with Cherub and Quest trailing behind them and the Ketches, West Wind, Tavy II and Luana away off to leeward South of Cheung Chau.

RACE IN EARNEST

Here the race started in earnest, with a light S.W. wind blowing, and the yachts started to beat up to the Cheung Chau Channel. By the time this was reached about 3.30 p.m., Azuma was starting to work out a nice lead on Wanderer, while Tern had done some skilful tacks and moved up into third place, closely followed by Monsoon and Sai Long, with Cherub and Penguin well astern and the rest either out of sight or given up. Rounding Cheung Chau, Azuma continued to forge ahead, while Wanderer went too far into the bay, lost the wind and was passed by Tern. Monsoon, lying fourth, was gradually easing away from Sai Long, who although keenly sailed does not appear to travel well close hauled in light winds, due presumably to being somewhat under canvassed.

About 5.00 p.m. the wind shifted to S.E. and started to freshen, so that the homeward trip was done in very much better time than the outward. The Sulphur Channel was fetched on one leg from Cheung Chau, closehauled on the starboard tack, with Azuma forging away ahead, Wanderer and Tern on divergent courses, but finally converging very nearly level at Green Island; next Monsoon, followed some way behind by Sai Long, after them to the Westward a fine sunset but not much sign of yachts.

In the harbour the wind fell rather lighter, but nevertheless "Azuma" was able to cross the line first at 7.13 p.m., seventeen minutes before the official time for calling off the race. "Wanderer" gave up the struggle on her way up the harbour, and Tern was next over the line at 8.03 p.m. However her handicap allowance on Azuma was just enough to bring her in first in corrected times by a bare margin of five minutes, with Azuma second and Monsoon, who finished at 8.35 p.m. third.

THE RESULT

Below are the official finishing and corrected times and a glance at them confirms the truth of the quotation that "many shall come but few are chosen," a very fair generalisation in yacht racing as a whole. (For the benefit of the uninitiated, D.N.F. means Did Not Finish.)

CHAMPION JOCKEY INJURED

London, Sept. 28. Gordon Richards' mount, Tom-mack, fell three furlongs from home in the race for the Newbury Autumn Cup and threw his jockey. Richards was brought back on the ambulance, and it was hoped at first that he had escaped with nothing worse than a severe shaking. Richards, however, was found to be suffering from slight concussion, and the doctor has ordered him to rest for a few days. The horse was not injured. The race was won by Sir A. Bailey's Cecil.

THE TREVESSA TROPHY

Dutch Boat Awarded First Place

Skilful sailing and excellent rowing featured the half yearly competition for the Trevesa Trophy, which took place yesterday afternoon, when the first boat (captained by Chief Officer Minshall of the s.s. Mausang) to reach the winning line was disqualified because the area of its sail was larger than the size stated in the regulations governing the competition.

The second boat to finish was under the captainship of Mr. Nisser of the s.s. Tjilondari, who was congratulated at the conclusion of the race by Commodore C. G. Sedgwick. Commodore Sedgwick presented the Trophy to Mr. A. H. Veltman of the Java-China-Japan Line, and a cup to Mr. Nisser, and in his brief speech he expressed regret for the bad luck of Chief Officer Minshall.

START OF RACE

Owing to his alertness Minshall got his boat away first when the starting shot was fired, and held the lead throughout the race. When the Kowloon Rock was reached his boat was already leading by over 500 yards. Following him were Mr. Nisser of the s.s. Tjilondari, and Mr. Armstrong of the s.s. Anshun.

On passing the Kowloon Rock, Mr. Armstrong got ahead of Mr. Nisser and was closely followed by Mr. P. M. of the s.s. Anshun and Mr. Follett of the s.s. Soochow.

Mr. Minshall was about half a mile in the lead when his boat rounded the mark near the Yacht Club. While rowing towards Cust Rock Mr. Nisser managed to get ahead of Mr. Ellis, who secured the second place so on after passing the Yacht Club. On the way back to the Yacht Club after passing Cust Rock, Mr. Minshall was forced to drop sail as the wind was driving his boat towards the shore. All the other boats followed suit, and as a result there was keen competition between Mr. Nisser and Mr. Ellis for the second place.

THE FINISH

Mr. Nisser, however, showed better yachtmanship and reached the winning line about five minutes after Mr. Minshall, who was disqualified after the sail area of his boat had been measured.

Those to finish the race were:—1. Mr. Minshall, of s.s. Mausang; 2. Mr. Nisser of s.s. Tjilondari; 3. Mr. Ellis of s.s. Liang Chow; 4. Mr. Follett of s.s. Soochow. Mr. Armstrong and Mr. P. M. of the s.s. Anshun, did not finish.

The umpires were:—Commodore C. G. Sedgwick, R.N., Commodore A. L. Shields, R.H.K.Y.C., and rear-Commodore G. G. Wood, R.H.K.Y.C.

The starters were:—Capt. Lumsden of the China Navigation Company, and Capt. Skinner of the Indo-China Navigation Company.

Time-keeper:—Yeoman of Signals Sansom.

BRITISH TEAM ROUTED

Only Two Wins In Ryder Cup

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Sept. 30. America regained the Ryder Cup by defeating Great Britain at the Ridgewood Country Club, New Jersey, by 8 games to 2, with 2 halved.

Of the five contests for the Cup America has won three to Britain's two.

Leading by 2 points in Saturday's foursomes, America won five of yesterday's eight singles and lost one, the remaining two being halved.

The only British player to win in singles was Percy Alliss, of Beaconsfield, who beat Craig Wood by one hole. The singles results were:

Gene Sarazen (U.S.) bt. J. J. Bussan (G.B.) 3 and 2.
P. Runyan (U.S.) bt. R. Burton (G.B.) 5 and 3.
J. Revolta (U.S.) bt. R. A. Whitcombe (G.B.) 2 and 1.
Olin Dutra (U.S.) bt. A. H. Padgham (G.B.) 4 and 2.
P. Allis (G.B.) bt. Craig Wood (U.S.) 1 hole.
W. J. Cox (G.B.) and Horton Smith (U.S.) halved.
H. Picard (U.S.) bt. E. R. Whitcombe (G.B.) 3 and 2.
A. Perry (G.B.) and S. Parks (U.S.) halved.

The result, and especially the margin of defeat, is a bitter disappointment to British golfers. While neither country has yet won in the other's terrain, it was thought that on this occasion our players, a blend of youth and experience, had an excellent chance of retaining the Cup.

The partnership to win in the foursomes was composed of the only two players who had previous experience of American conditions. These were the brothers, Charles and Ernest Whitcombe.

On being asked what was the matter with his players, Charles Whitcombe, the captain, seemed nonplussed.

"In the case of the youngsters," he said, "I think what stage fright had something to do with it."

GERMAN SOCCER VICTORY

First Match With Bulgaria

(Special to the "Hong Kong Daily Press" (Copyright).)

Leipzig, Oct. 20. The first football match Germany has ever played against Bulgaria, and the last match the German National team will play before leaving for England, was witnessed on Sunday afternoon by 38,000 enthusiasts, who despite the black skies and squally weather stayed till the very last.

Although the German team carried off victory by 4 goals to 2, thus avenging the defeat suffered at Sofia on May 26 last by 2 goals to nil, this fight proved extraordinarily stubborn, and were it not for the good luck that followed the Germans, the result might have been different.

The Bulgarians, were men of magnificent physique and well trained; their goalkeeper was exceptionally strong, and so was their forward line, but still they lacked in combination, which is skill that comes from long experience. The Bulgarians certainly showed that they had come determined to win, and their play remained full of spirit, until the last.

The German National team was identical in composition with that chosen to play in England. From the very beginning the Germans forced the pace, and had a strong wind at their back. This advantage however did not help them in keeping the ball low. For 20 minutes the score sheet was blank, but at this juncture the Germans obtained their first goal. As the referee signalled the score the crowd cheered themselves hoarse. A few moments later the Germans scored their second goal just before the half time whistle blew.

Should no children survive her he left the ultimate residue for the promotion of the cure and treatment of cancer.

CIVIL SERVANT FINED

Before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday Chan Hon-san, a clerk in the Education Department Department was charged with unlawfully committing an act preparatory to exporting raw opium from the Colony to Jamaica, and with unlawfully sending raw opium through the General Post Office to Kingston, Jamaica, on July 28 this year.

Mr. W. J. Lockhart-Smith Assistant Crown Solicitor, conducted the case for the prosecution and defendant was represented by Mr. Leo D'Almada Jr., instructed by Mr. F. H. Loseby, of Messrs. Russ and Co.

Defendant was convicted on the first charge, and fined $200, while the second charge was dismissed.

LENIENCY ASKED

Mr. D'Almada, addressing Mr. Schofield in mitigation of sentence, said defendant was fifty years old and was born in Jamaica and came to Hong Kong with his wife and nine children, six of whom were still dependant on him. He had been for the last fifteen years in the Education Department, and had a very satisfactory record. His conviction would result in his dismissal from his job, and also the loss of his pension, and this, plus the shame and disgrace to his standing, would be sufficient punishment to him. Defendant had not taken advantage of his position in the Government, and as Mr. Lockhart-Smith and Mr. B. Taylor, the Government Monopoly Analyst, were not understood, pressing for a heavy sentence, he would submit that a fine would meet the case. Mr. Schofield then imposed the fine mentioned above.

Two coolies, Chan Heung, 38, and Wong Kwan, 21, appeared before Mr. Macfadyen at the Central Court yesterday, accused of trespassing in the Kennedy Road revolver range. They pleaded that they went to the spot to dig up lead to sell, as they needed money. Acting Sub-Inspector Smith said there had been complaints of petty thefts from the storeroom on the range, the door of which having been broken open several times. The coolies were bound over for a year.

VERY LAME STORY

Before Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy yesterday, To Lin, 36, and Chan Wong Ku, 19, were charged with unlawful possession of 2 bed covers, a pair of trousers and a pair of stockings, at Wanchai on October 9. Both accused were discharged with a caution.

It appears that on the day in question at about 9 p.m., a detective was walking along Canal Road when he saw the second defendant walking along Hennessy Road with a parcel in his lower coat pocket. He searched the boy, and found that the parcel was carrying contained a bed cover. Defendant said that he had just redeemed it from a pawn shop. When told by the detective that it was too late for any pawn shops to be open, defendant replied that he was going to sell the article.

The detective then asked him where he got the bed cover from, and he replied that he had been given the article by a man named To Lin, first defendant. The lad took the detective to a house where he saw To Lin who told the detective that he had picked up a parcel containing a bed cover, a pair of trousers and a pair of stockings at the hillside near the Coffee Plantation, and had given them to second defendant to pawn.

His Worship said that the story, although a very lame one may be true and so discharged the two accused with a caution.

DISPUTE OVER A BOILER

At Kowloon Magistracy yesterday Pun Chan-chun, 38, unemployed, was charged with having obtained $46 from Yip Sing by false pretences. It was alleged that Pun had sold Yip a boiler which did not belong to him. The defendant was discharged while the owners of the boiler, the Wai Woo Machinery Shop, were advised to take civil action.

Detective Sergeant R. Ellis told the Court that about 15 years ago the boiler was purchased by the Wai Woo machinery shop for $1,800. Five years ago, the boiler was placed on vacant piece of ground at Tai Kok Tsui. On the 15th of this month, the owners went to see if the boiler was still there and found that it had gone. Enquiries were made and it was found in a marine dealer's shop. It was then that Yip Sing, the complainant, stated that he had bought the boiler from defendant for the sum of $46.

Defendant admitted having sold the boiler to complainant and alleged that he had purchased it from another man, whom he could not find.

Pleading guilty to a charge of having snatched a handbag and its contents, valued at $11.10, from Miss Lily Wong, of No. 70 Prince Edward Road, first floor, on Saturday, Kam Ngau, 30, unemployed was sentenced to four months' hard labour by Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday, and ordered to be Shanon stated that complainant was if found unfit, to serve two months' hard labour in default. Inspector given twelve strokes of the birch, or walking along Nathan Road near the Orient Tobacco Company about 9.55 p.m. when defendant came behind her and snatched the bag. An alarm was raised and the man was arrested by a Chinese constable.

Two months' hard labour was passed upon Lam Tak, 23, unemployed, when he appeared before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy yesterday and pleaded guilty to the theft of a jacket, a cabin key, and four golf tees from private car No. 2504, which was parked outside No. 209 Prince Edward Road on Saturday. Inspector Portallion stated that the thefts were committed, between 3.15 and 4 p.m. last Saturday and two detectives arrested defendant while on patrol at Kowloon City. Defendant admitted a previous conviction for larceny this year. Mr. C. P. Grandgerard, a passenger of the s.s. President McKinley, was the complainant.

Pleading guilty to a charge of having unlawful possession of seven bottles of Chinese wine, Chan Cheung was fined $20 or one month's hard labour by Mr. W. Schofield yesterday. The accused stated that he was working as a street coolie and carried the bottles for someone.

GERMAN LOAN

Not Possible

(Special Air Mail Service)

London, Sept. 30.

It is now understood that the impending visit of Dr. Schacht, President of the Reichsbank, to London will not be concerned with the question of a new German loan.

During several weeks past inquiries have been made in the City about the chances of a new loan amounting to at least £10,000,000 being floated.

Germany's need of resources wherewith to finance her scheme of rearmament is such that an even fantastic rate of interest apparently did not deter her from inspiring the inquiries aforesaid.

The rumour that the British Government had intervened on diplomatic grounds proves to have been both premature and unnecessary, because the City itself had already made it clear to the German intermediaries that the proposal could not, on technical grounds alone, be entertained. The last German loan, the "Jotash" "sevens" stands at about 60 per cent.

Even if it was agreeable to Berlin it would not be practicable for the public here to be invited to subscribe to a foreign loan bearing interest at 10 per cent. As, therefore, the loan was not possible on financial grounds, there was no occasion for the Government to veto it on other grounds.

"16,741 MASTER BARBERS ENDORSE PREP SHAVES"

Good Morning!

PREPARE YOUR FACE
FOR A PAINLESS SHAVE

PREP

Here is a NEW Shaving Joy—That Stimulates as it Soothes and Heals— A Cream With Many Personal Uses

SOOTHES RASH AND ERUPTIONS

"Surprising relief—even in case of chronic skin eruptions—is often reported by Prep users."

"For more than twenty years I have been troubled periodically with an almost intolerable itching on my cheeks and chin. To my very great surprise and gratification, I found Prep gave the most instantaneous and lasting relief of any preparation I had ever tried."

C. M. D.—MONTFORD

Since that time I have used Prep at the first signs of a head cold and it has never failed. I am very grateful for the relief it has given me and as thousands of men and women suffer a similar disability, I cannot give too hearty a recommendation to them I can conscientiously say: PREP.

A. S. W.—Windsor, Ont., Canada

QUICKLY STOPS BODY ODORS

"Friend of doctors and debauched under the arm it is safe, reliable and very effective in daily use."

"I am ever more grateful to Prep for its ability to keep my body odorless without affecting my complexion."

A. V. P. G.—WINDSOR, ONT.

Before using "Prep," my third shave with the same blade would be so uncomfortable that I was obliged to stop. Now I am pleased to say that this morning I got my smoothest shave with the same blade.

J. E. K.—CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

TAKES AWAY THAT
"TIRED FEELING"

"You will forget in 15 seconds that you were tired—when Prep wakes up the old 'punch' as any boy!"

SMOOTHES OUT
CHAPPED SKIN

"No more painful chappings from winter sports. With plenty of Prep your hands stay soft, smooth, white."

RELIEVES TIRED, ACHING FEET

"Prep has a lot to do for me—refreshing, soothing the sore muscles and skin. The shaver's delight."

REMOVES STING OF INSECT BITES

"Prep is the joy of hunter and sportsman—and gardener too!"

HEALS CHAFED OR "SCALDED" SKIN

"Colours and blemishes—like Prep—will disappear when you have used it."

"I weigh over 200 pounds. My work requires continuous driving. I suffered badly every few years from chafing. Then I discovered Prep, which gave immediate relief—has kept a good skin."

HENRY W.—DETROIT, MICH.

Men—Watch Your Prep!

Many men find that their women folk use Prep for their complexion, too. They say it's "just simply perfect." It's that look in Prep which they like, men. But they don't need to see your Prep Shaving Cream to get it. That same "look" is available in Prep Skin Cream—a creamy, pink, all-purpose cream that guards against Skin-Age. So—tell them to buy themselves a jar of Prep Scented Skin Cream—it contains that same tonic and it's made specially for women—as wonderful for their skin as Prep Shaving Cream is for shaving.

PREP WILL NOT stain Clothing, Sheets or Towels

Obtainable at all Drug & Department Stores $1.00 per jar.

CHINA'S FOREIGN TRADE

Shanghai, Oct. 1.
The Chinese Maritime Customs report for August shows that both exports and imports registered a slight decrease. Cotton imports showed a marked drop in August due largely to the improved and increased cotton crops in North China, while cotton exports for the same month increased.

Rice imports also took a drop, but this has become a serious problem in China. The Italo-Abyssinian situation is causing considerable apprehension in many countries and Siam and other rice-producing countries have decided to concentrate their rice supplies. China has been hard hit by the floods this year and there is no hope of salvaging the rice crops in the affected areas. The food supply problem has consequently become an acute one in this country.

Machinery imports during August showed an increase of $7,000,000 over July, indicating a bigger future for Chinese industry.—China United Press—(by mail).
